

FACULTY OF LAW

The Faculty of Law aims at preparing legal professionals who will play decisive leadership roles, as advocates practicing in courts, academicians, legislators, judges, policymakers, public officials, civil society activists, and legal counsels in the private sector by maintaining the highest standard of professional ethics and a spirit of public service. Legal education should also prepare professionals equipped to meet the new challenges and dimensions of internationalization, where the nature and organization of law and practice are undergoing a paradigm shift. At the same time, legal education must also be socially engaged and sensitize students to issues of social justice. New and innovative solutions are needed to ensure that common people have access to justice, and the legal ideas and legal knowledge protect the common interests. Therefore, it is imperative that legal education should prepare students with the appropriate vision aptitude, interest, commitment, skills, and knowledge necessary to work with socially excluded people poor at the grass-root level in order to ensure justice.
